SUMMARY OF ST. LOUIS MARKETS.

At the opening of yesterday's session it seemed as though there was a sharp up-turn. At the opening of yesterday's session it seemed an inough there was a snarp up-to-in.

There was apparent good support by the professional interests. Later it developed that legitimate market conditions were not of a kind to justify the calminitions of this class of speculators. The early buying was by traders who believed that ourside interest would develop later in the day and afford a chance to take prefile on early purchases. The basis of the upward movement at the start was a generally better feeling across. Statistical news favored the bulls. Receipts were light and country offerings small. At the end of the first hour the bottom dropped out. There was almost no speculative demand and the professionals who had banked on an advance were willing enough to get out and save further looses.

Corn held up well despite several attempts to break it. There was a most cash demand and some export inquiry.
